NH Collection Prague Carlo IV newly refurbished

The 19th century 5* hotel was originally built as the majestic seat of a well-known bank until its later transformation into a luxury hotel offering premium services such as wellness & spa, a lobby cocktail bar and an all-day dining restaurant. The hotel was now refurbished and given the building's status as a National Heritage Site, the renovation was supervised by the Heritage office. The hotel's gastronomy outlets have also undergone a renaissance and the hotel's sought-after wellness and spa received a brand-new tiling for its twenty-metre-long heated pool with two whirlpools. In the second phase of the renovation later in the year an updated look is planned for the sauna and steam room. Source: NH Collection Hotels

The Castle hotel in Třešť reopened after two years of reconstruction

The demanding reconstruction of the building, including the garden, pond and park, lasted two and a half years and cost almost a quarter of a billion crowns. In May, the chateau, which has served the Academy of Sciences as a conference center since the 1980s, was opened to academics and the public. The reconstruction of the chateau itself, which has been a cultural monument since 1973, focused mainly on the interior. Source: Academy of Sciences of the Czech Republic

Historical festivities of Jakub Krčín

The largest builder of Czech ponds, Jakub Krčín, left behind breathtaking water structures and the reputation of a man who was associated with hell for success. According to legend, Krčín is released from hell for one day every year, and this must be properly celebrated. The historically tuned program of the festivities traditionally presents groups of historical fencing and dances, demonstrations of crafts or historical competitions. An integral part of the festivities are also concerts, a craft market and festive parades through the city. The final night parade leads to the dam of the Svět pond, where Krčín returns to hell. The festivities end with fireworks fired above the surface of the pond. Třeboň, July 22 - 23, 2022.

Exposition Universe in the Museum of glass and jewelry in Jablonec nad Nisou

The theme of space has been transformed into unique objects by forty Czech artists – glass and jewelry makers. Space is omnipresent – around us and within us, and the selected artists respond to the perception of this concept in different ways with their work. The most frequently represented material in the exhibition in the Museum of glass and jewelry in Jablonec nad Nisou is glass. Thanks to its character, glass stimulates the imagination regarding the mystery and limitlessness of space and the higher principles of existence, in contrast to the trivialities of our earthly life. Through Sept. 11.
